Singlish

Cheat Sheet

Embrace local lingo and feel like you're at home in this amazing island! Singlish – a hybrid language that blends elements of English, Chinese, Malay and Tamil. It's one of the things that makes Singapore so unique.

Lah

Usually used to mark the end of a sentence.

E.g. OK lah. Thank you lah.
Happy lah.

Leh

Used at the end of sentences to turn them into requests.

E.g. I want a drink leh.
Guide me to my room leh.
Tell me where to hail a cab leh.

Shiok

Means "Makes me feel great!".

E.g. Dinner was shiok!

Wah

An exclamation.
Used like "Wow!",
"What???" or "Really???".

E.g. Wah! This cocktail is really good.

Alamak

Means
"Oh my goodness!".

E.g. Alamak! I need help with my luggage.

“Lim” Like A Local

In the mood to lim (drink) some coffee or tea? Here's something to drink to - a guide to how Singaporeans order!

Kopi O

Black coffee

Kopi Gao

Less-diluted coffee with condensed milk

Kopi Siew Dai

Coffee with
condensed milk,
less sweet

Kopi Gah Dai

Coffee with
condensed milk,
sweeter

Kopi C

Coffee with evaporated milk

Kopi C Kosong

Coffee with
evaporated milk,
unsweetened

Teh Tarik

Tea with condensed milk,
pulled Indian-style

Teh Halia

Tea with ginger water and
condensed milk,
pulled Indian-style

Milo Dinosaur
